Commentary

ECB Moves Into Quantitative Easing

The U.S. initiated three rounds of quantitative easing (QE) efforts that lasted more than six years. Through October of last year, the central bank bought more than $3 trillion worth of Treasuries and mortgage-backed securities. Japan has also been using quantitative easing to boost its economy and fight deflation. In November, with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's anti-deflation arrows loosing effectiveness and the Bank of Japan reducing its economic growth forecast, the country doubled down on the strategy. Japan announced an increase in both its rate of purchases as well as what it would buy, adding stocks and real estate to a list already containing government debt securities.

The European Central Bank (ECB) has been wanting to get in on the QE action for quite some time, but there has been stiff opposition to stepping off that cliff. Arguments against the move are both legal and political. The modern EU was founded under treaties that restricted the ECB from financing governments, and many claim broad purchases of government bonds steps over that line. Another concern against the measure is based on the premise that expanding the money supply will reduce the incentives for over-spending governments to continue reforms and balance their budgets.

Despite the opposition, on January 22, the ECB's Governing Council revealed its plan to purchase about 1.1 trillion euros ($1.3 trillion) in government bonds as part of an asset-purchase program. The purchases will amount to 60 billion euros ($70 billion) a month through September 2016. Sovereign bonds will be purchased in proportion to the size of the member countries. Projections from the ECB expect the effect should be about a 0.4% boost to inflation in 2015 and 0.3% in 2016.

The euro reacted by falling to its lowest level against the dollar in more than a decade. Export-heavy countries are likely to see a benefit as their products will be cheaper abroad. The lower yields resulting from QE in the Eurozone may also push investors into U.S. Treasuries, whose yields are relatively higher.

The ETF Dividend & Income model advanced 1.0% for the week and is up 0.9% year-to-date. Top performers included JPMorgan Alerian MLP Index ETN (AMJ) +2.7%, WisdomTree Emerging Markets Equity Income (DEM) +2.3%, First Trust Technology Dividend (TDIV) +1.5%, and Vanguard Dividend Appreciation (VIG) +1.2%. The four BulletShares ETFs were the laggards, all posting one-week returns ranging from flat to +0.3%.

The ETF Strategic Allocation model gained 0.6% for the week and is up 0.8% year-to-date. Top performers included iShares Core MSCI Emerging Markets (IXUS) +2.9%, Vanguard Total Stock Market (VTI) +1.7%, Vanguard Small-Cap (VB) +1.4%, and iShares Core MSCI Total International Stock (IXUS) +1.1%. The laggards included United States Commodity Index Fund (USCI) -1.7%, SPDR Barclays International Treasury Bond (BWX) -1.6%, and SPDR Barclays Short Term High Yield Bond (SJNK) +0.0%.

The ETF Tactical Growth model increased 1.5% for the week and is up 0.3% year-to-date. Last Tuesday, we initiated a new 14% position in iShares Gold Trust (IAU). The week's best performers included PowerShares QQQ (QQQ) +3.4%, iShares S&P 500 Growth (IVW) +2.1%, and WisdomTree Japan Hedged Equity (DXJ) +1.6%. Laggards included iShares Gold Trust (IAU) +0.0%, iShares Core High Dividend (HDV) +0.6%, and iShares S&P 500 Value (IVE) +1.1%.

The ETF Sector Rotation model advanced 1.4% for the week and is up 1.8% year-to-date. Last week, we sold SPDR Consumer Discretionary Select Sector (XLY) and bought iShares Cohen & Steers REIT ETF (ICF) with the proceeds and available cash (~24.5%). The iShares Transportation Average ETF (IYT) jumped 2.5% to lead this model's holdings, and iShares Nasdaq Biotechnology ETF (IBB) tacked on 1.4%. Vanguard Utilities ETF (VPU) made a positive 1.1% contribution, and iShares Cohen & Steers REIT ETF (ICF) is already showing a 1.4% profit.

The next scheduled update is: Monday, February 2, 2015
We may send trade recommendations throughout the week.
