

Buyback Premium Portfolio 11/30/2014

These portfolios are presented to you for the purpose of investing a lump sum of money or to dollar cost average over time. You can start at any time by either investing an equal dollar amount in each stock in your chosen portfolio or investing in the exact proportion represented (additional contributions may be added in the same fashion). This portfolio is updated at the beginning of each month. David R. Fried maintains shares in his personal account at Charles Schwab for tracking purposes (shares owned do not necessarily reflect the quantities shown). From time to time his shares will vary from those represented in the model portfolio below. Trading began on August 2nd 2000. The total return figures exclude dividends and trading commissions. This portfolio is selected via our proprietary “rules based” strategy and is always fully invested. Please be mindful that this portfolio changes on a regular basis.

On August 2nd 2000 we introduced the "Buyback Premium Portfolio". We advised you to start this portfolio by investing a lump sum that you are comfortable with to buy equal dollar amounts of the following 5-stocks; Sears, EOG Resources, Delta Airlines, International Game Technology and General Motors. This strategy was back tested from 1984-1998 and achieved an average annual gain of 38%. Past performance is no guarantee of future results.
